8 Things to Avoid in Acapulco

What You Need To Know

8 Things to Avoid in Acapulco

Flying to Acapulco can be one of the best experiences you'll ever have. It is the most common way of getting into the most renowned vacation resort in the world and what's nice to know about it is that Acapulco can easily be reached either by plane or by boat.

Acapulco is located on the Pacific coast of Mexico and for long years, it has been deemed as the home to one of the most beautiful bays on earth – the Acapulco Bay. Many tourists from near and far away places come to Acapulco just to witness the breathtaking views that the bay provides. Many have been delighted to it, making it one of the reasons that people come and return to Acapulco as they possibly can.

Not only is the bay of Acapulco delights the many tourists and residents alike. There are also a myriad of attractions that Acapulco has long been offering. The white sand beaches and the turquoise waters are just a few of the many. The high rise hotels, fine dining, great accommodations, exciting water and land sports, and the city's vibrant nightlife have contributed much to the fame that Acapulco is currently holding – a legendary place worth visiting and exploring.

However, just like the rest of the world, Acapulco is a place that remains a captive of street scams and the likes. Yes, Acapulco is not free from crimes and other felonies. Perhaps one of the reasons that contribute to this situation is its being a city inhabited by millions of people with different personalities and characters. Thousands of visitors coming from different places in the world even visit the city and do their own business there. Whatever these people are dealing with, they are the ones actually that make Acapulco not a perfect haven to consider.

With the possible crimes lurking at the corners of Acapulco, tourists, especially the first timers, must exercise certain caution when visiting the place. As I've said, Acapulco is not free from crimes. In fact, different types of scams happen almost everywhere from the airports, to hotels, streets, to the beaches, and even to the most holy places you've ever think of, the churches.

Given all those facts, it is then a wise idea to know what the possible things to avoid in Acapulco. I am actually referring to those things, whether objects or places, that may make your vacation to Acapulco miserable. So if you want to know what these things are and if somehow you want to protect yourself when visiting the place, then I found no reason for you not to consider the following:

Thing to Avoid #1: Airport Scams

So you're traveling to Acapulco by plane. Well, the airports in Acapulco are not at all safe. Some kind of scams dwells there. In fact, several cases of stolen luggage have already been reported, and this for sure ripped off the visitor's first day in Acapulco. So if you don't want this to happen to you, then do your own responsibility to take care of your belongings. If possible, always keep an eye to your luggage. Don't leave them unattended even at the safest part of the airport. In case you need to leave and ask for someone to keep an eye on it, make sure that you know and trust the person. The point here is not to leave your belongings to strangers.

If you are new to Acapulco, make sure that you have a trusted means of transportation to wherever you may go and stay. It is expected that taxis may wait for you outside of the airport, but make sure that the taxi you are considering can be trusted. Deal with the price first before you enter. Note that in Acapulco, one of the most common airport scams made by taxi drivers has something to do with the price. For instance, the most favorite type of scam is to charge an extra 50 to 100 bucks for minor scratches and dings when you turn the car back in. So it is then wise to deal with the price first and be sure that the driver can be trusted.

Note that the taxis in Acapulco are government certified. This means that they have license with a photo of the driver, as well as a taxi number displayed, outside and inside of the car. So consider only those that are government certified, and don't ever let the driver pick up additional passengers for that would be another form of scam. Perhaps to make sure that you are dealing with the best price, arm yourself with ideas on how much is the usual taxi fare in the city. Well, note that in Acapulco the standard rate for the taxi is 20 to 30 to 40 pesos for longer trips across the town.

If in case you want to hire a car from a rental company to fetch you in the airport and take you off to wherever you want to go, then be prepared for the 15 bucks extra that the rental agencies may charge for a theft insurance or maybe some other explanation. And, pay attention to the pre-inspection routine for the existing car damage as the favorite scam that happens to taxis might also happen here. Take note of this.

Thing to Avoid #2: Police and Jail

I bet you may have heard some horror stories about the Mexican police and the Mexican jails. Well, they hold true in Acapulco and in the rest of Mexico. So if in case you feel that you need to approach the Mexican police and ask for help, it is probably a wiser idea to drive through the embassy instead. Not all policemen in Acapulco can be trusted. Note that!

According to some reviews, most of the police in Acapulco, especially those who are in blue uniforms, are more likely to give you hassles. They will corner you particularly if you stray from the main strip of the city at night. So to avoid this from happening, better watch out for them.

Today, certain rules in Acapulco were set for the authority to follow. According to some reports, the new federal police troupes wear uniforms in black, brown and gray colors. They are set to add security to maintain the public safety in Acapulco. Also, those who are assigned to assist the tourists, known as “tourist police”, are also considered helpful. These men can be found along Costera and they often wear white shirts, dark shorts and dark hats. Well, these men are operating in Acapulco simply to reduce the crimes that lurk in the corner of the streets. For added security, they now carry guns.

Thing to Avoid #3: Blue Shirts

When you're in Acapulco, watch out for blue shirts. I am actually referring to those people along the main strip and around the Plaza Bahia, wearing bright blue shirts and appear to be helpful to the public. They will offer you something or just about anything you are looking for. The truth is, they can be irritating especially if they offer you many things you aren't looking for. Well, many of these men are actually scam artists who will just cheat you out of your money. If you pay attention to them, you are just wasting your time, unless they are your target for whatever purposes you may have. So if you don't want to waste your time, avoid them.

In Mayan Palace, you may meet timeshare sales people. Well, to some degree, they are acting like those with the blue shirts. So again, to save time, avoid them.

Thing to Avoid #4: Prostitutes

Prostitution has been considered throughout the world as the society's big headache. Well, this is also true in Acapulco and throughout Mexico. So when planning to travel to Acapulco and spend nights and days there, I'm warning you to avoid the prostitutes. Yes, you heard me right. Acapulco has its own prostitutes although it is claimed that the government of Acapulco strongly considers prostitution as illegal. Well, despite such claim, prostitution certainly exists in the city. They are, however, controlled by the government to some extent.

So if you want to be entertained legally, without causing you headaches in the end, it is better to avoid the city's prostitutes. These prostitutes may lurk along the La Condesa strip, but you can also find them in other areas in the city.

For better entertainment, you can go to the lively strip clubs in Acapulco. Just go there and who knows you might meet your soul mate there. Or, if you prefer you can consider the Acapulco bars and restaurants where you can taste a wide section of Mexican and international cuisines. In these bars and restaurants, you may even enjoy the breathtaking views of the Acapulco Bay to which many are delighted to it. So entertain yourself in the best possible way, not through the prostitutes.

Thing to Avoid #5: Drugs

In Acapulco, the drug related violence has increased recently. Much of the reported crimes and felonies throughout the city are in fact associated to the production of illegal drugs. This is also the cause of a number of deaths that you may have heard about in Acapulco.

The drug-related violence in Acapulco is to some degree not targeted at foreign residents or the tourists. However, this is not enough reason for you not to be vigilant of those who may approach you and ask you to deal with their drugs. Yes, there are some parts in Acapulco where you may be approached by someone whom you don't know about and ask you for a drug deal. This situation happens along the main strip in the city and somewhere in the beaches. So if you happen to be a victim of this evil thing, just say “no” and walk away. It’s better to keep yourself away from these people than subject yourself to trouble.

It is further important to note that in Acapulco, a number of people were already arrested and thrown in jails because of drugs. Certain laws were passed and one of those is the control of the importation, purchase, and possession of illegal drugs. If you will be arrested because of that, you will be sentenced to certain severe penalties, including imprisonment of several years following a conviction. So if you don’t want to subject yourself into this kind of trouble, better leave your hands clean. Don’t entertain drugs.

Thing to Avoid #6: Public Drunkenness

Public drunkenness is deemed a sign of harm in Acapulco. The reason? Well, such belief mainly stems from the fact that if you stumble around the city drunk, you are an easy target for those who seek trouble. There are people in Acapulco who find doing harm and taking advantage of the people who are drunk as fun. So if you don’t want yourself to subject into this kind of situation, don’t get drunk. If you do, ask a friend or someone you know to send you off to your hotel.

It is further important to note that in Acapulco, public drunkenness is highly prohibited. In fact, those who are found drunk on the street are being hauled off to jail. This of course will leave stains to your vacation trip, so avoid doing it. Try to seek for the comfort of your own room while you still have wits to do so. Just don’t try something that can ruin you and your name.

Just note that in Acapulco, an excessive consumption of alcohol that can cause unruly behavior can lead to serious problems with the Mexican authorities. In fact, several cases associated to public drunkenness were already reported and that involved major arrests, accidents, violent crimes, raped and even deaths suffered by those who can’t control themselves. So make yourself free from all these unfortunate situations and help make Acapulco a peaceful destination for your ultimate vacation. That simply is the rule, so make it work.

Thing to Avoid #7: Fighting

Another cause of public violence is fighting, the reason that it is included in this list of things to avoid in Acapulco.

Basically, fights don't seem to be very common in the city. One main reason for this is the city's being laid back. Many of the people are friendly to tourists. But still, this is not enough reason for you not to avoid being in a fight. You just don't know where and when it will happen. So if possible, keep yourself safe and always remember that a fight can lead you to the Mexican jail where you will be kept for a whole night or days in exchange of the public disturbance you've made. So don't involve in the fight. Help keep the peace.

Thing to Avoid #8: Politics

So the last would be politics.

Just like the others areas in the world, Acapulco has some of the serious political problems. It is even usual during elections that the voting will be accompanied by certain kinds of violence. There are many from opposing parties arguing and even fighting in front of the public just because of certain political concerns. Many of the officials in the city even remain to be enemies. Worse is the fact that it is dangerous enough for the Mexicans to be activists, the reason that foreign residents or tourists are strongly advised not to push themselves to politics.

With such condition, it is then better to maintain a low profile while in Acapulco. So if you happen to be a big person in your own country, try to lower your level while you are in Acapulco or in Mexico.

So everything has been said. Now, are you still with me? If so, then congratulations and have a happy trip to Acapulco!
