CRUISING TO BERMUDA

TIPS AND HINTS FOR THE FIRST TIMERS

Cruising to Bermuda:

Tips and Hints for the First Timers

Bermuda is one of the most blessed places on earth worthy of visit on a cruise. Many people thought that it is part of the Caribbean that many of them considered a cruise to Bermuda as a cruise to Caribbean. But the truth is Bermuda is not part of it. It is just a cluster of “islands” miles away from the Caribbean that remains until now as one of the outside territories of the United Kingdom.

Cruising to Bermuda is such a great experience worth remembering. A lot of wonderful things are waiting for every cruiser to partake. There are the fine dining on board, the comfy and elegant accommodations, the great facilities and of course everything that Bermuda has to offer – pink sandy beaches, historic museums and buildings, high-rise hotels, golf courses, exciting water sports, and the lush flowery gardens around. With all these assets, it’s no wonder that Bermuda cruise is now becoming highly popular that thousands of people from near and far away places come to Bermuda on cruise. It was in fact found out by certain surveys that the number of cruise ship passengers now equals the number of visitors arriving by air.

Now if you are one of those thousands of people who are planning to take a cruise to the island of Bermuda for the first time, then note that there are a lot of things you need to consider first before you go. Though it may seem simple to step on board and go for the cruise, there are actually a lot of factors and things that must be planned well in order to experience the ultimate Bermuda cruise of your life. Included in this list of important things to note prior to your departure are the budget, the target place, the right time to go, and the cruise itself.

Let’s take a look on these matters closely.

Setting the Budget

The budget is by far one of the most important things to prepare when planning for a vacation to Bermuda on cruise. Well, this is mainly for the fact that a cruise vacation won't be successful without it.

So when planning for a cruise to Bermuda, think about your budget. This is indeed the first best move you can ever make. However, when setting the budget, consider first the number of people who will go with you. Just ask for how many is going on the cruise. This can be a challenge to those who haven't experienced traveling much or those who haven't taken an organized vacation. But, this can be done as successful as possible when you try asking for help from your family or your friends who are experts to this kind of venture.

It is important to note that on cruise, there's no age limit. All age groups are welcome to go on board. Well, this is one of the reasons that many families have considered cruising as one of the best vacation options to consider. However, if you don't prefer to have your kids with you while on cruise, then that's not a problem. A number of cruise ships are available out there in Bermuda that caters to almost adults only.

Aside from the number of persons going on board, it is also important to ask yourself on how much you are really willing to spend for a cruise vacation in Bermuda. Note that in Bermuda cruise, there's no such thing as "maximums". What usually takes place is the so-called "rule of thumb" which leaves you being required to budget about $100 per person, per day. If you are an outsider, this budget does not involve the airfare. Well, for many vacationers, this rule seems to be fairly reasonable despite the fact that a number of the cruise ships that operate in Bermuda now charge certain extras to their passengers.

Speaking of extras, many of the cruises to the Bermuda these days easily have set extras that easily cost $1,200 more than the cost of tickets. Some of the common extras available today are the following:

- Per person, instead of per cabin rates.
- Cost on all beverages plus a 15% gratuity each time your order.
- A 15% or minimum of $90 per person gratuity with the use of exclusive onboard specialty restaurants.
- Spa rates
- Cost on bingo
- Gym and fitness center rates
- Casino
- Art auctions
- Photographs taken by the cruise staff
- Rentals of tuxedo
- Golf lessons
- Shore excursions

Consider all of these possible extras when setting your budget for your cruise to Bermuda. Don't also forget the length of time you will be spending on cruise for the number of days you'll spend on board will highly affect your budget in return.

Where to Cruise

Of course, you've got Bermuda as your target cruising destination. However, it is not as simple as setting Bermuda as your main destination. The reason? Bermuda is such a long island consists of islets connected by bridges. Each place boasts a number of wonders, including the pink sand beaches, towering hotels, golf courses, and lush gardens. All of these attract visitors, including those who are on cruise.

So if you prefer to tour around the island by cruise, then look for some cruise ships that cater to such need. Considering the itineraries involved is by far one of the best things you can do to make sure that you are getting what you really want from your Bermuda cruise vacation. There are some cruises actually that operate only to certain areas in Bermuda and they do visit only limited sites on the island. So be sure then to know the itineraries for your trip.

When to Cruise

Cruising to Bermuda is deemed perfect during summer. Yes, it is actually during this period that hundreds of couples and families book cruise schedules for an exciting Bermuda vacation. Well, what make summer really best for Bermuda cruising is that the Bermuda weather during this time is highly cooperative. However, the usual cruise rate during this season is pretty high. So if you have a limited budget, then summertime could not be the perfect period to go on board.

But, don't despair. There is spring and fall when the rate for Bermuda cruising is pretty low. Perhaps one main reason for this lower rate is that kids are in school and the weather in Bermuda can sometimes be uncertain. For instance, the winter in Bermuda is considered by many locals and tourists alike as the only "high" season for tropical locations like the Caribbean.

It is further worth noting that Bermuda is often visited by hurricanes and this is highly common during the fall. But despite this condition, certain cruise ships are still able to manage with it simply by changing their itineraries. This is reason basically that you'll see changes in the destinations than what you have originally planned.

Choosing the Best Cruise Ship

A number of cruise ships operate in Bermuda nowadays. They usually depart for the island from a number of East Coast ports, including New York, Philadelphia, Boston, Baltimore and Norfolk, as well as Florida. Included in the list of these available cruise ships are:

Furthermore, do not try to enter Bermuda if you do not have an adequate or acceptable current documentation. This is also true if you belong to the FBI and Interpol stop list. Aside from this, it is maintained by certain laws in Bermuda that all arriving passengers must contact the immigration if they are visitors or corporate representatives, or simply residents of Bermuda. For those who are Bermudians, the government offers and approved work permits for them, but this permit is not strictly on vacation.
